Just wanted to drop you a note and let you know how great things are going with little Princess. It's like she's lived here her whole life. She and Indy play SO rough with one another, but seem to be finding each other's limits. Princess definitely benefited from her time with Germans [German Shepherds] because she knows how to outrun bigger dogs (there are lots of places she fits but Indy doesn't, and she knows them all). She knows how to put him in his place.

The favorite new activity award must go to the nightly walks after dinner. Both dogs basically lose all composure and start barking furiously and running all over the place, and into each other. Getting the harness and leash on can be a challenge.

... I could go on and on, but she seems to be having a great time. She really loves the yard and just seems to be happy overall.
